FUNERAL OF EX-MINISTER PHELPS

Dwight's Eloquent Tribute. The funeral of E. J. Phelps, ex-minister to Great Britain, took place at New Haven, Conn., yesterday. The Yale faculty, members of the undergraduate body of Yale and the citizens of New Haven in general atin Battell Chapel, which was crowded.

the funeral address, and the Rev. Dr. T. T. fered prayer and read from the Scriptures. The coffin was carried into the chapel on years. He said that the Yale brotherhood had lost one of its most distinguished mem-bers, a man who was an honor to the great company. Mr. Dwight spoke of the beauty of the life that had just closed. He dwelt upon its completeness, cut off in the enjoy-ment of an unclouded mind, in the midst ment of an unclouded mind, in the midst of a busy life, full of honors that had come without being sought, and surrounded by a family and a host of loving and devoted friends. To the law students, who had come to the funeral in a body, and to those of the academic students who had been under the dead professor's instruction, President Dwight said that the work of the deceased man had closed on earth, but had only just begun in its greater sphere. He had impressed his great personality upon thousands of Yale men, who are better and nobler for his influence. It had always been a source of constant joy, said Mr. Dwight. a source of constant joy, said Mr. Dwight to him to know that at Yale Prof. Phelps to him to know that at Yale Prof. Phelps was appreciated by the student body as a "genuine gentleman, withal a man, but one of education, culture and wide experience in life. His quiet dignity, his forcefulness when need drew from him an exhibition of sturdiness and his breadth of view stamped itself indelibly on all who had come in contact with him."

The body was taken on the 5:52 p.m. train to Burlington, Vt., where the interment in the family plot will be made on Tuesday. The body was accompanied to Vermont by the widow, by Charles P. Phelps, a son, and by Mrs. H. Loomis, a daughter, and by a number of friends. The floral tributes were profuse.

AGAINST CHANGE. Petition Opposing Legislation on Local Option Lines.

Special Correspondence of The Evening Star. ROCKVILLE, Md., March 11, 1900. A number of petitions are in circulation different sections of the county asking the Montgomery county delegation in the legislature to oppose any effort to change the existing local option law. The circulation of the petitions was started, it is stated, by the report that some legislation of the kind would be attempted.

Mrs. Marie O. Gebicke and Mr. James Liston, both of Washington city, were married here this afternoon at the parsonage of St. Mary's Catholic Church. The cere mony was performed by Father Schmitt, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Washington.

mony was performed by Father Schmitt, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Washington. Rev. Paul Reynolds, formerly pastor of St. Rose's Catholio Church at Clopper's and St. Mary's Church at Barnesville, has gone to League Island to report for duty as chaplain in the army.

The Rockville Academy base ball team for the coming season was organized last evening. Mr. Bernard Kelchner was elected manager: Claude Poss, captain, and Russell Brewer, secretary and treasurer. The team will be composed of the following players: Poss, Adamson, Robertson, Edward Dawson, Kelchner, Day, Higgins, Owens, Walker, Alinutt, Somerville Dawson, Henderson and Brewer. The first game will be played here March 31 with the Business High School team of Washington.

THE LANDLORDS EXCLUDED

Banquet Given by the Tenants in Loan and Trust Building.

Appropriate Toasts Responded to,

A gathering of a rather unusual character was held at the Hotel Cochran Saturday evening, when the tenants of the Washington Loan and Trust Company building met around the banquet board and spent the evening socially. The purpose was to make the occupants of the big building acquainted with each other, and from the time the idea was broached until its very successful realization the tenants entered cordially into the spirit of the affair, and it was owing to this mainly that it proved to be such a success. It is likely other meetings of the sort will be held in the future. Only the tenants of the building were present, and while the landlords were also represented, it was generally understood that their but as tenants, as the company, erected the buildings also occupied in it.

erected the buildings also occupied offices in it.

However, the idea of a landlord and his tenants meeting together for social enjoyment was seized upon by the toastmaster, Mr. Henry E. Davis, and, with a wit which kept the company in roars of laughter, he managed to say some things about owners which were all the more effective as introductions to the speeches of Mossrs. John Joy Edson and Dr. John A. Swope, the president and vice president, respectively, of the company.

The contagion of Mr. Davis' humor could not be resisted, so that hilarity abounded until the very close of the function. Toasts were responded to by Thos. S. Hopkins, James Tanner, A. D. Hazen, F. L. Siddons and others. The enjoyment of the evening was increased by the singing of solos by Melville D. Hensey and Henry Kaiser, and by selections rendered by a quartet composed of Messrs. Hancock, Rieman, Hensey and Kaiser.

Corporal Tanner, who was introduced by the toastmaster with an eloquent allusion to the patriotic services rendered by him, made one of his characteristic speeches, which was bright and eloquent, and in his allusions to current events he displayed a broad Americanism, which seemed to find a responsive chord in the breasts of the enterprising business men who composed the audience. Mr. Tanner seemed to be inspired by the sight of so many young men, and he spoke with unaffected earnestness of the love of country which was displayed by those who entered the service in the crisis of 1861-65, and by those who responded to the call during the war with Spain. With a confidence which, he said, had not been diminished, but rather increased as the years passed over his head, he looked forward to the future of the country, which, he felt confident, was as safe in the hands of the rising generation as it had been with those who were now about to leave the stage of action.

Much of the pleasure of the evening, as allusions to current events he displayed a

Much of the pleasure of the evening, as well as the great sucess of this experiment, was due to the committee having the matter in charge, which consisted of H. E. Davis, E. W. Bradford, E. A. Jones, J. L. Atkins, T. W. Power and H. L. Mark. One of the surprises consisted of the badges worn in the coat lapels of the guests, which had been designed in pen and ink by Mr. M. C. Dashiell, each of which bore something appropriate to the person for whom it was designed.
